PHILADELPHIA, SEPTEMBER 28, 1822.

NUMBER 61.

PRINTED BY ATKINSON & ALEXANDER,
No. 55 MARKET STREET,
Four doors below Second st.—north side.

CONDITIONS.

The Saturday Evening Post is published once a week, at two dollars per annum, payable half yearly in advance, or THREE DOLLARS if not paid before the end of the year.
Subscribers will have the privilege to insert an advertisement, throughout the year, to the extent of half a square, at two dollars additional, with an allowance for alterations. Non-subscribers pay the usual prices. A wish to discontinue the paper must be made known before the expiration of the time subscribed for, or the engagement will be considered good for another six months.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

'Tis said, Seclusion hath no balm
For him, whose base pursuit is gold;
'Tis said, retirement ne'er can soothe
The heart of avarice;
Tenny not the man
Who shuns reflection's hour.

Reflection's hour!—to few 'tis known,
To these, the chosen time, how dear!
To retrospection consecrate
Is the heart's alone.

I will not on its hoards intrude,
Nor tell how fancy riots there;
Suffice it, that to Misery's child
It bourn the holy time.

The memory wanders, and the forms
Of days, departed, hover near;
The childhood's smile and childhood's sigh
Beside the soul again.

How fair the visions, boyhood knew!
How sweet the way with thornless flowers;
But joys, recalled, seem more than joys,
For arrows seem like bliss;
Tenny not the man
Who shuns reflection's hour.

LINES

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

To those who may have reason to felicitate themselves on their application, the following verses may prove an acceptable though imperfect offering.

Ye oft to these confess'd, love,
The pure and ardent flame
That burn'd within my breast, love,
And thou didst own the same;
Like heaven's enraptured ray, love,
Its radiance round us spread,
To light our opening way, love,
Where youth and pleasure led.

Imp'd these most sincere, love,
My passions earliest vow
Was breath'd with hallow'd fear, love,
Lest thou'dst forget it now;
For kind and gentle heart, love,
Thou' warm with purest truth,
Might with that jewel part, love,
Where pleasure tempted youth.

The glorious sun on high, love,
More constant can't pursue
His course throughout the sky, love,
Than is my heart to you;
And like that sun it beams, love,
With warm affection's fire,
And rapture on it gleams, love,
As oft thy smiles inspire.

And I have prov'd thee fond, love,
Through chequer'd scenes of woe,
All other bliss beyond, love,
To know and feel thee so,
To know that thou art mine, love,
The treasure of a heart
That sooner would resign, love,
This life than with thee part!

SONNET—TO *****.

Oh, shall we meet again,
With smiles of mutual gladness;
Or shall we e'er remain
Apart, in anxious sadness?
When last we bid farewell,
My heart was fill'd with sorrow,
Yet Hope seem'd proud to tell
We part, to meet to-morrow.

The morrow's sun arose,
But Hope, I found, deceiv'd me,
For twilight's ling'ring close
With no kind news relieved me.
I left, in memory's dreams,
Live o'er again those hours,
When social pleasure's beams
Charm'd with their witching powers.

Yet in that pleasing view,
Which memory's oft revealing,
The pain of our adieu
Seems o'er my bosom stealing.
For moments thus gone by
May pass—alas!—forever,
And like a farweld sigh
Our fond joys may sever.

Our dearest hopes are vain,
They smile but to deceive us,
And leave us worlds of pain
With no balm to relieve us.
Oh! let us meet once more,
Or if thy heart say—never,
Adieu—our friendship's o'er—
We'll part, then—forever.

WOMAN'S LOVE.

A woman's love, deep in the heart,
Is like the violet flower,
That lifts its modest head apart
In some sequester'd bower;
And blest is he who finds that bloom,
Who sips its gentle sweets;
He needs not life's oppressive gloom,
Nor all the care he meets!

A woman's love is like the spring
Amid the wild alone,
A burning wild, o'er which the wing
Of clouds is seldom thrown;
And blest is he who meets that fount
Beneath the sultry day;
How gladly should his spirits mount!
How pleasant be his way!

A woman's love is like the rock
That every tempest braves,
And stands secure amid the shock
Of ocean's wildest waves;
And blest is he to whom repose
Within its shade is given;
The world with all its cares and woes,
Seems less like earth than heaven.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS.

THE HOUSE OF MOURNING.

While travelling through a lonely forest of the western country, I came to a solitary cottage, partly shaded by stately trees. On my arrival at the door, I knocked upon the post; a person stepped forward; drew aside a blanket that served as a door, and bade me come in: I went in, sat upon a bench, and reclined against the side of this rustic dwelling; when, looking round me, lo! it was the house of mourning.

There, in one corner, on a bed of straw, in benumbed death's chill embrace, lay the wasted remains of an affectionate husband and protecting parent. A melancholy sensation unavoidably pervaded my mind. But a few hours since, his mortal existence trembled on the verge of dissolution—at length, dropped into the vapory oblivion of unknown; and his immortal existence rose on soaring ideal pinions to Him who gave it.

Yes—he is progressing in that measureless journey from which "no traveller returns;" he has left his relations and changing pleasures, and gone far, far from this tabernacle of mourning—No more shall he groan under the racking pains of sickness; no more shall the sorrows of this woe-worn world canker his felicity.

While thus reflecting on a sublime futurity, a neighbor entered this solemn and silent house of death; he recalled my mind to the gloom of mortality; I again looked round on the members of this sorrowing family. Here sat a weeping companion, absorbed in the profusion of grief; holding a smiling infant that had not yet learned its own mortality, or realized the bitter dregs of human woe. There leaned a child against the chimney corner, and oft turned her eyes towards her lifeless father, while a filial tear would trickle down her tender cheek. All, all seemed as living monuments to declare the event of death; and, though mantled in silence, yet they manifested a realization which no tongue could express.

Having rested a short time, I rose and went out. It was the Sabbath; the sky was clear, and the sun had passed the meridian—I again resumed my journey, and as I walked along through the little opening that encircled the rustic domicile, and looked on the labor of him whose body was now mouldering away, to mingle with the common elements of our mother earth, I was again wrought up in pleasing and melancholy contemplation—that all the works of our labor will soon know us no more for ever; and as I entered the lonely woods, whose leafy trees shaded my path, methought I was entering the "valley and shadow of death." And while recollection recalls to my mind the joys and sorrows I have seen, I shall never forget the house of mourning.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

When we reflect upon the value of reputation and character—the dangerous liability we are constantly under of losing it, and the extreme difficulty of regaining it after it is once forfeited, we cannot be too vigilantly careful in preserving such an inestimable jewel. In this we are the guardians of our own happiness, and we shall find, that "he who stumbles, falls, who falling finds none to help him," and if he is even favoured by time to make atonement by good conduct for his former errors, still, the remembrance of them will rise like departed ghosts before him—he will recollect them with pain, and the uncharitable will sometimes reproach him, if not openly at least with sarcastic sneers and unmanly insinuations. And, although the good and wise, will cast the mantle of forgiveness over his failings, his own heart will still reproach him, and destroy that confidence which is ever the shield of innocence. He will be tempted to quit the circles where he is known, because he knows not to what extent a censorious world may extend their prejudices against him—he will be induced to banish himself from the society of his former acquaintance to seek in the novelties of some distant and new abode that happiness which he has unfortunately lost. Here he must raise a new name and a fortune for himself, and happy will he be if he so profit by the mistakes of his former days, as to secure him from error in future. Whenever a man is overtaken in a fault—if he has been hurried by passion's impetuous impulse into the commission of a crime, or by even a venial error, has forfeited the good opinion of his neighbours, instead of making his defence by a vain attempt to cover and palliate his guilt, he would act more wisely to acknowledge his fault with humility, and endeavour by future good conduct to conciliate the esteem of his fellow citizens—for mankind are always slow to believe what a man has to say in extenuation of his own faults, and it often happens that the more vigorous his defence is, the more firmly his guilt is fixed upon him.

THE SOLITAIRE—No. IV.

"Of all human actions, pride seldom obtains its end; for aiming at honour and reputation, it reaps contempt and derision." MONTAIGNE.

Pride is one of those vices which people generally overlook, because they all partake of its influence. It is, nevertheless, a demon of a very base kind. It is a principle which ought to be held in the greatest abhorrence, and cast from the breast as a viper with a deadly sting. Under the dominion of pride we serve the devil, for where it exists, neither virtue, religion, nor morality, can abide. As, therefore, these only ought to influence the mind, so every particle of pride should be rooted out, and "meek-eyed humility" cherished in its stead. It is not the pride of dress that I would have in view, neither is it a pride of excelling in virtue or learning; but it is an overbearing spirit which will trample upon the poor, the meek, or the ignorant—destroy their rights, and heap up a pile of injuries when a fountain of blessings ought to rise in view. It is a pride which fills the possessor with conceited notions of his own excellence, and makes him consider all other mortals beneath him. It is a pride which, with an ocean of vices, aspires to the perfection of deity, and aims at a throne which it never was intended man should ascend. It is a pride with which Lucifer himself was possessed, when he attempted to overthrow the throne of Grace, and rise superior to the "great first cause." Like Lucifer, too, will the fall of that spirit be, who possesses the vice just mentioned. For a while fortune may smile upon his vanity, and success crown his views; but in the end he will find his doom irrevocably fixed, and finally cast beneath the most abject of those whom in his prosperity he did not deign to look upon. Humility is the principle intended for us; it is a heavenly principle; it sheds a lustre on human nature, makes it acceptable to the Creator, and at last crowns it with a wreath of never-fading joys.

A PRETTY STORY.

The late Earl of Exeter had been divorced from his first wife, a woman of fashion, and of somewhat more gaudy of manners than "ladies who love their ladies like." He determined to seek out a second wife in a humbler sphere of life, and that it should be one who having no knowledge of his rank, should love him for himself alone. For this purpose, he went and settled in a village (under the name of Mr. Jones) at Hordnet, an obscure village in Shropshire. He made overtures to one or two damsels in the neighborhood, but they were too knowing to be taken in by him. His manners were not boorish, his mode of life was retired, it was too odd how he got his livelihood, and at last, he began to be taken for a highwayman. In this dilemma he turned to Miss Hoggins, the eldest daughter of a small farmer, at whose house he lodged. Miss Hoggins, it might seem, had not been used to romp with the clowns; there was something in the manners of their quiet, but eccentric guest, that she liked. As he found that he had inspired her with that kind of regard which he wished for, he made honorable proposals to her, and at the end of some months, they were married, without his letting her know who he was. They set off in a post-chaise from his father's house, and travelled across the country. In this manner, they arrived at Stamford, and passed through the town without stopping till they came to the entrance of Burleigh-Park, which is on the outside of it. The gates flew open, the chaise entered, and drove down the long avenue of trees that leads up to the front of this fine old mansion. As they drew nearer to it, and she seemed a little surprised where they were going, he said, "Well, my dear, this is Burleigh-house, it is the home I have promised to bring you to, and you are the Countess of Exeter!" It is said the shock of this discovery was too much for this young creature, and that she never recovered it. It was a sensation worth dying for. Ye Thousand and One Tales of the Arabian Night's Entertainment! hide your diminished heads! I never wished to have been a lord but when I think of this story.

THE ITINERANT—No. VII.

PROVERBS FOR BACHELORS.

1. Covet no woman's love, but whom you will be diligent to oblige—for a small neglect is taken by them as a great ingratitude.
2. The love of a virtuous woman is a great blessing; but if once lost by ingratitude, you will find that she will turn her love that could not last into a revenge that will.
3. A proud woman, like an imprudent prince, always loves him best by whom she is most flattered.
4. If you aim at the favors of a lofty mistress, you must highly extol her person and parts, and agree with her opinion in all things, though ever so opposite to reason.
5. A proud woman, like a stately horse, must be managed with a curb and a strict rein.
6. That virtue is never safe that is under the guardianship of pride; the latter will be maintained, though the former be sacrificed to maintain it.
7. Pride in a beautiful woman is like a flaw in a diamond; it lessens the value, spoils the lustre, and remains incurable.
8. He that hath a prudent wife hath a guardian angel by his side; but he that hath a proud wife hath an evil spirit at his elbow.
9. Giving presents to a woman to secure her love is like filling a sieve with water.
10. She that hath some design upon you will first oblige you with some engaging courtesy to become her debtor; but be careful of those women who are generous in the beginning.
11. Ingratitude is said to be worse than the sin of witchcraft; and he that trusteth a woman he hath once found ungrateful, is worse than bewitched.
12. Court not a reconciliation with a woman who hath once deceived you, lest she triumph over your submission, and make you bear the burden of her infirmities.
13. To a woman you love behave yourself boldly and with freedom, though justly and respectfully; for a manly behaviour will awe her to be grateful, when a cringing fondness may occasion her to presume on your good nature.

Lines written on returning home.

Dear lowly cottage! o'er whose humble thatch,
The dewy moss has velvet verdure spread;
Once more, with trem'ling hands, thy ready latch
I lift, and to thy hovel bow my head.
Dear are thy inmates! beauty's rosy smile,
And eye soft melting hails my wished return;
Loud clammers infant joys—around, meanwhile,
Matured breasts with silent rapture burn.
Within these narrow bounds I reign secure,
And devious love and prompt obedience find,
Nor sigh to find my destiny obscure,
Where all is lowly, but each corner's mind
Content, if pilgrims passing by our cell,
Say "with her sister peace, there virtue loves to dwell."

PUBLIC MEETING.

"And over Fashion's votaries wield the sceptre."
In pursuance of public notice, a numerous and splendid meeting of our female Corinthians and tippy Exquisites, convened at Dandy Hall on the evening of the 19th inst. in order to devise some scheme whereby the dresses and appendages of Fashion should be subjected to the criticism of persons of acknowledged taste in the beau monde before they were exhibited to the gaping eyes of the congregated world. Roger Rum-one, Esq. a Grecian of the first water, was called to the chair, and, in compliment to the Ladies present, Mrs. Martha Modish and Miss Fanny Furbelow were nominated as his supporters, Samuel Scribe officiating as secretary for the evening.

Mr. Rum-one, as soon as order could be obtained, rose from the chair, and gracefully waving his right arm to enchain the attention of the audience, began, "Ladies and Gentlemen, it has been often a source of the deepest regret to me, that in this, our famous city, there should exist no society, to whom the importations of fashion, from France and England, should be assigned, and from whose fat and example the Bloods and would-be Exquisites of the lower orders, should adopt their costume. In London there flourish such a society, from the ingenuity and judgment of whose members originate every new design, while their power is so universally acknowledged and their displeasure so deeply dreaded, that no person of fashion, however outlawed by the society, dare introduce any innovation in the established cut. I now beg leave briefly to state the object of myself and friends in calling this meeting, which I feel happy to find so numerous attended, it is to propose for your consideration the formation of a society similar in its jurisdiction and intentions to the one now existent in the metropolis of Great Britain. As I conceive the exertions of the Ladies will be requisite in carrying the plan into effect, should any of them coincide in my ideas the meeting will feel honoured in hearing their sentiments.

The moment the president had taken his chair, Miss Susan Spencer and Miss Biddy Blue-nose both sprang to their feet, when the chair having decided the floor in possession of the latter Lady, she commenced—"Such a society was not only well calculated to answer an admirable purpose, but it was absolutely necessary something of the kind should be established to preside in the republic of Fashion, and also to take cognizance of the rank of those who appeared in our streets arrayed in the newest mode. She deplored as a lamentable truth, that no sooner was an improvement established in any article of clothing, but every Laundress and Chambermaid appeared on the promenade in it, thus keeping the inventions of the leaders of Fashion eternally on the rack to devise something new. Such glaring facts (she continued) called peremptorily for reform. She therefore concluded by moving that a committee be appointed to devise some regulations for the government of said society, and report them at our next meeting, and that power be given to said committee to fix upon a suitable designation for the embryo society."

The above question was carried by an unanimous vote, and the meeting adjourned until Friday, the 27th inst. having previously instructed the Secretary to make such an arrangement with Messrs. Atkinson & Alexander, the editors of the Saturday Evening Post, for publishing their proceedings as he should think proper.

R. RUM-ONE, President.

S. SCRIBE, Sec'y.

THE DERANGED PARROT.

Certain physiologists have asserted, that madness was one of the privileges of human nature; that the instinct of animals, being surer than our reason, was likewise more solid, and that their brain was not so liable to get out of order. I answer this by the anecdote of the Parrot of M. de Bougainville, which was as completely cured of lunacy, as ever was an inhabitant of Bedlam or Charenton. This bird less remarkable for its plumage than its chattering, was for two years on board the ship of that celebrated navigator, and a great favorite with the officers, to whose amusement he very much contributed. Having one day had an engagement with an enemy's vessel, during which the cannonading had been extremely sharp, it was found that Kobley, the Parrot, had disappeared, and though the most diligent search was made for him, he was nowhere to be found. It was supposed he had fallen by the wind, or cut by the blow of a bullet; but to the great surprise of the whole crew he was seen two days afterwards, coming out of the cable tier, where it appeared he had hid himself.

His re-appearance excited the greatest joy, and almonds and carresses were most prodigally bestowed upon him; but Kobley was entirely insensible to these demonstrations of kindness, and looking around him with a most stupid stare imaginable, answered all the questions put to him only by an imitation of the noise that had so much frightened him;—poum!—poum!—poum!—were the only sounds he could pronounce! I myself saw this unfortunate bird twenty years after the combat, perched upon a stick in an antechamber, repeating his eternal cannonade, and accompanying it with a beating of his head, and fluttering of his wings, in which his fright was still depicted.

Gibbon's appreciation of his own character.

"May 8th, 1762.—This was my birthday, on which I entered into the twenty-sixth year of my age. This gave me occasion to look a little into myself, and consider impartially my good and bad qualities. It appeared to me, upon this inquiry, that my character was virtuous, incapable of a base action, formed for generous ones, but that it was proud, violent and disagreeable in society. These qualities I must endeavour to cultivate, extirpate, or restrain, according to their different tendency. Wit I have none. My imagination is rather strong than pleasing. My memory both capacious and retentive. The shining qualities of a good understanding are extensiveness and penetration, but I want both quickness and exactness."
[See Gibbon's Miscellaneous Works.]

Cheerfulness and hilarity, when unprovoked by unwholesome incentives, undegraded by brutality, or untainted by licentiousness; instead of being interdicted as a crime, ought to be prescribed as one of the means of urging a lazy circulation. A man may be merry upon principle, and occasionally take a laugh, as others do a walk, for the benefit of his health. A celebrated Italian comely turns altogether upon a stratagem to cure a hypochondriac by making him laugh. It is such in our power to look on the sunny side of things, instead of keeping the eye constantly fixed on the darkened hemisphere of human life. There is no faculty of the mind which it is of more consequence should be exercised and cultivated from the earliest youth than that of self-control. This power is to be improved by exercise as well as that of the memory or the muscles.

The young are shown to novelty, the old to

CORRACOA, Sept. 2.

Porto Cabello is still in the hands of the royalists—the force, say 1500. Moravia made a feint of going to windward to attack Lagaira, but suddenly changed and went to Maracaybo, which has no doubt fallen into his hands, as there was but a small garrison there.

Since the capture, the frigate and schr. the prize, appeared off the port—the frigate came in—the others have gone to join Moravia at Maracaybo—it is said the frigate was condemned as unseaworthy. The Patriots only want two frigates to have the complete command of the Main. Le Tor was here a few days since—the frigate came to Porto Rico. A singular circumstance occurred yesterday in my presence—was the Patriot brig Orinoco was under weigh, one of her crew, who was in irons, jumped out of one of the port holes, and in spite of his shackles, swam ashore—beat off his irons and fled to the mountains.

The privateer La Centella is here—her consort, the Condor, commanded by the noted Pelot, was taken by the frigate Ligeira and brig Hercules, in a calm. Pelot escaped with four men in his boat—the Centella escaped by means of her sweeps, and put in here upon pretence of distress as they do not allow any armed Patriot vessel to come in under their national flag.

Local Affairs.

A colored boy, while bathing at the Draw-bridge, on Tuesday morning, was drowned, every effort to save him being fruitless.

On Saturday evening last, a negro man entered the store of Mr. Bernard Gallagher, in Seventh Street, and offered a one dollar bill to purchase a pound of sugar; while the person in the store was in the act of placing the note along with some others in a bank book in the drawer, the negro knocked him down with a club, and carried off the money, amounting to $28.

The corner stone of a new Hebrew Synagogue, in Cherry street, near Third, was laid on Thursday morning last. The design of the building is by William Strickland, Esq. architect, and is said to be remarkably handsome.

On Sunday evening last, Peter Robinson, who lived in this city, No. 6, Chancery lane, was killed about three miles from Lancaster. He was in the Hensbury stage, when the horses taking fright, he jumped out, and at that instant the stage upset, crushing him under its weight.

A negro woman is stated to have been violently seized in a house in Arch street, and carried off, by three men who had been for some time lurking in the neighbourhood. It is pretended she was a runaway slave. The matter is under investigation.

Mr. Julion, Missionary, from India, last from Liverpool, arrived in this city on Thursday morning. Her health is very much improved. She crossed the Atlantic in the Amity, to New-York. Mr. Henry Canmeyer, late chief mate of the Albatross, also came passenger in the Amity.

A fire broke out on Monday last, in the stable of Mr. Kain, back of No. 39 Shippen street, and before assistance could be procured, it was consumed, with a large quantity of hay. His dwelling was much injured in the back part—about a house No. 91, the property of Madame Jane de Tine, the back part and roof of which suffered considerably.

THE TRAGEDY OF TRAGEDIES,

OR, M'DUFFIE AND CUMMING.

Accounts from the South state, that these gentlemen having proceeded to North Carolina for the purpose of settling their differences, and after meeting with some interruption from the civil authority, Mr. M'Duffie proposed to Col. Cumming to fight on the 21st or 23d inst. To this proposal, it is said, Col. Cumming objected on account of fatigue, and offered to meet him on the 4th. Mr. M'Duffie, in reply, stated that as the challenged party, he had the right of choosing the time of meeting, and if his proposition was not accepted to his further notice of the business. This proposition, being finally accepted by Col. Cumming, Mr. M'Duffie left the place, and arrived at Greenville, S. C. on the 5th inst. The next day Col. Cumming reached there and posted Mr. M'Duffie, who treated his antagonist in the same manner—thus done, both gentlemen started for their homes, and then fell the curtain upon the second act of the tragedy of the duel!

Another account states, that Col. Cumming having by some means, ascertained that Mr. M'Duffie (who, as the challenged, had, of course, the choice of terms,) intended to make six paces the distance, instead of 10, as is usually the case, and had been practising accordingly, required a post-mortem of one day, that, in the meantime, he might have an opportunity to put himself on an equal footing, in this deliberate and premeditated work of death, with his antagonist. M'Duffie refused to grant the delay, and then ensued mutual communications in handbills or newspapers, charging each other with want of proper spirit, &c. &c.

From the Boston Evening Gazette.

The two victims to the dangerous insanity of the prisoner Trask, who mortally wounded them in the 6th inst. have expired. Francis Duggan died on Tuesday, and John Newman, yesterday in the county jail. Since the attack made by Trask upon his fellow prisoners, he has been in solitary confinement, and chained to the floor of his room; the instrument with which he killed his companions has never been discovered. On Monday the same man, being without any known instrument, found his hands and the collar that encircled his chest, and fractured them into eight or nine different places. His hands were made after the fashion of those used on board of ships—consisting of twisted rope for the wrists, running on a straight bar, and fastened at one end by a large screw, and at the other by a stout pin, which was as much and a half broad, and an iron collar of one inch thick, was connected with the chains that secured his legs, and was fastened by a bolt. There was some of them, twisted like a cork screw. There was no mark of a sharp instrument on any of the fragments, but the fractures indicated the use of main strength. The bolt belonging to the collar, was broken short off near to one of the wrists, and the running iron was twisted in such a manner, that the whole was effectually broken. The man appeared to be swollen, but the cause of the swelling was not ascertained. He was confined with a double set of hands.

It is to be noted, upon examination, that the

...of the Colon ... is quite different. We have here some of Moravia's own who were lately taken prisoners, and they are treated with all the mildness due to their misfortune.

FROM A LIVERPOOL PAPER.

The Albion.—The bodies of two more of the unfortunate passengers lost by the wreck of this vessel near Garretstown stand some time since have been picked up; one, that of Col. Proctor, on Sunday, the 21st ult. near the Old Head of Kinsale, and which is very remarkable, after having been so many weeks in the water, very little disfigured or decayed, but soon after it was brought ashore it evinced symptoms of decomposition. The identity was ascertained by some papers and a card bearing his name which were found in his pocket, together with a sovereign, another gold coin, and a small case with a lock of hair tied up in it. The body of the other unfortunate person was extremely mutilated, and nothing was found on it which could lead to identification. Mr. Gibbons, the agent of Lloyd's at Kinsale, caused both the corpses to be interred near the spot where the other bodies had been deposited which were washed ashore or picked up immediately after the calamity.

PIRACY & MURDER.—In the Kingston, Jamaica Chronicle, of the 3d of August, there is a detailed account of a piracy and murder, attended with very aggravated circumstances. A boat was picked up at sea, with 4 men on board, belonging to the sloop Blessing, capt. Smith, which on a fourth voyage from St. Jago de Cuba to Jamaica, was fallen in with by a piratical vessel, commanded by a white man, with a mixed crew of colour and countries, among whom were English or Americans.

After bringing the sloop too, the pirates took out the captain and his son, with all the crew, and carried them on board of the schr. leaving the sloop in possession of his people; he then demanded of the captain his money or his life. The captain stated that he had no money, but proffered him the cargo, which consisted of one hundred barrels of flour, and fifty tierces of corn meal. On the following day, not producing any money, a plank was run out in the starboard side of the schr. upon which the pirate made capt. Smith walk, and as he approached to the end, they tilted the plank, when he dropped into the sea, and when in the effort of swimming, the piratical captain called for his musket, and discharged it at him, when he sunk, and was seen no more! The rest of the crew were ironed below, with the exception of his son, a boy about 14, who witnessed the fate of his father. In the agony of tears and crying, the captain took the butt-end of his musket, and knocked the boy on the head; thereafter took him by the foot, and hove him overboard. On the following day, having previously taken out all the rigging, sails, &c. of the sloop, the pirate set her on fire, and burnt her; and on the same day, gave the crew, consisting of four persons (having stripped them of every article but what was on their backs,) the jolly boat, with a bucket of water, and one biscuit each person, without compass, and told them to be off, or he would sink them. In the afternoon of the same day, the boat was picked up by the schr. Mary Ann, belonging to Black River, and the crew landed at Port Morant, on the 18th July.

The Montreal Gazette contains some further particulars of the north-west expedition under Lieut. Franklin. The survivors of the party have reached York Factory, where they were about to embark for England. The expedition sat out in the summer of 1819, and the following year reached the shores of the Great Bear Lake, in lat. 67 deg. where they wintered. In 1821, they reached the Copper Mine river, descended it to the ocean, and coasted along the Polar sea north easterly, a distance of 500 miles, by the end of August, when the commencement of winter, with heavy falls of snow, compelled them to return. They retraced their steps with great difficulty, and suffered extremely for the want of provisions. One of the party from England, nine Canadians, and one Esquimaux, died.

Bristol Township, September 23.
On Saturday night last, between the hours of twelve and one o'clock, some notorious villain, or villains set fire to the New School House and place of worship, near the Village of Milestown, about six miles from Philadelphia. They put a quantity of shavings and combustible articles in one of the air holes under the floor, but providentially and fortunately, a young gentleman of the neighborhood happened to pass by and discovered the flames, which had nearly burnt through the floor immediately under the stair case, and by alarming the neighbors, it was with considerable exertions that the fire was extinguished, without much damage being done to the building.

The Trustees of said School have offered a reward of Fifty dollars, on conviction of the perpetrator of the horrid crime.

District Court for the City and County of Philadelphia.

On motion of P. A. Browne, Esq. ANTHONY SIMMONS, Junior, was sworn and admitted an Attorney of the Court.

Sept. 26th, 1822.

A New Comet.—Another Comet has made its appearance, which has been observed in Europe and in this country. The Charleston Courier of the 19th inst. says that it has a tail apparently 15 feet long, and that it is passing from west to east with great rapidity, in the southern quarter of the heavens.

Accident.—A Mr. Sassman, living near the borough of Bethany, Wayne co. (Pa.) fell from a scaffolding while at work upon a new building, on the 16th inst. and died in a few hours afterwards. In falling his head struck a rock. He had erected the scaffold himself a few minutes before the melancholy accident. He has left a wife and several children to lament his loss.

Squirrels.—These destructive animals are stated to be making great ravage among the corn in Ohio. Myriads of them were found in every direction, and it was feared many of the farmers would lose the whole of their crops. Several hunting parties had been formed, and in many instances thousands of them have been destroyed, but still their numbers did not appear to be in the least diminished. Great quantities of them were killed in fields with clubs and stones, and they were literally thronging the streets and house tops of the villages.

The Arkansas Gazette says that settlements were commenced in the Texas as early as 1660, and had an independent Spanish government. A few years since there were but three towns in its whole extent, 300 leagues in length and 100 in breadth. The towns of San Antonio, La Bahia, and Nacogdoches, have gone to decay since 1812. It is calculated that there may once have been 7000 souls in Texas, but in 1820, it was doubtful whether there were 4000.

New Flag.—The State of Peru, has established a new flag. It consists of three stripes; the two exterior stripes of carnation red, and a white one between them. In the centre of the white stripe will be a sun in carnation red; the superior flag, or flag of the State, a carnation red, with a sun all in white in the centre. The colours of Merchantsmen to be the same as the national, three stripes.

Awful Calamity.—The following melancholy circumstances occurred last week in the town of Oresick, in Chenango county, N. Y. A large number of men were employed in raising a barn; two young men were scuffling, and the neck of one was broken in the affray; in this situation he was carried before his father, who was holding a corner post of one of the beams; when (dreadful to relate!) the father, shocked at the horrid spectacle, left his hold, by which means the timbers fell and killed seven men on the spot!

Volcano of Clay.—A very remarkable phenomenon has lately attracted the Sicilians and travellers to the eastern declivity of Etna. It is a volcano of clay, which has burst forth in a plain at 200 paces from the sea. The crater does not exceed two and a half feet; the slimy clay spouts up, rises six or seven feet and spreads itself in such a manner, that at a mile's distance, it forms a marsh or slough. This clay is excellent for pottery.

It is proposed to erect at Plymouth, Mass. a building commemorative of the landing of the pilgrim fathers of New England.

The Old Colony Memorial states that the sword with which Col. B. Church, despatched the Sachem Philip in 1175, after he was shot by one of the natives, friendly to the English, has lately been presented to the Historical Society of Massachusetts.

The Canal Loan, lately advertised, was taken at Albany, on the 23d instant, by Messrs. Astor & Son, of New-York, in six per cent stock, $100,000 at 107½ and $150,000 at 107.

Five cases of yellow fever, three of which have terminated in death, have occurred in Poplar street, Brooklyn. Four of the sick had been frequently in New York, but the origin of the fifth case cannot be satisfactorily accounted for.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

It is the custom in many of the villages of New-Jersey, to send the ladies a verse or two by way of compliment on Valentine's day, expressive (of course) of affection and unalterable love. As a humble specimen of so romantic a custom, the following lines are handed you for publication. They were written a year or two ago to a belle of Springfield, then on a visit to this city, and though there is a particle of locality about them, yet they may prove amusing to some of your readers.

STANZAS—TO MISS

Say, with fortune's smiles propitious,
Where's the moment we can claim,
Brighter, sweeter, more delicious,
Hallowed by a nobler flame.

When in Beauty's blaze of splendour,
Brightened by the morn of youth,
We a sacred vow can tender,
Pledged on the face of truth.

Yes and while through life a ranger,
Time has passed on joyous wings,
Waiting too, an eastern stranger,
Blossoming like the rose of spring.

Still those roses he may nourish,
They alone I cannot prize,
Nor can faithful Friendship flourish,
Only from thy diamond eyes.

But that charm, I'll ne'er deceive thee,
Which a polished mind bestows,
Cannot, will not, shall not leave thee,
Like thy morning's fairest rose

And, could I, (will fortune bless me)
That bright flow'et's guardian be,
What though storms and tempests press me,
Still through all I'd look to thee.

But should fortune round us sporting,
Waft her gifts on downy wing,
I will then her favour court,
In thy path her roses bring.

Here's the harp, whose chords now broken,
Then might sound with nobler swell,
Here's the warm and honest token,
Ere thou bid'st thy long farewell.

Last week before the Buckingham (Vir.) Superior Court, there were not less than five men arraigned for murder. One who is named Cubbs, was charged with the murder of a neighbor, some four or five years ago. He then fled and on returning recently, has been arrested.

The ship Tennessee, capt. Hamilton, belonging to this port, was cast away on the 30th of July, five leagues to the eastward of Montevideo. Mr. Hockley, the supercargo, and one seaman were drowned. The beach was for miles strewn with the wreck, and cargo. A part of the latter had been saved and brought to Montevideo.

HEALTH OF BALTIMORE.

The following report of the interments in that city was made to the Health Office for the last week, ending the 23d inst.—total 97—of which one was of typhus, and thirty-six of bilious fever! Is it not singular that such great mortality should prevail from bilious fever? We understand that it is principally confined to Fell's Point; the place if we are not mistaken, where the malignant fever prevailed a year or two ago. If it is the same kind of bilious fever which at that time proved so fatal, does not justice require that its appropriate name should be given it?

Thomas Edmondston, aged 24 years, a native of this city, and one of the crew of the ship Gov. Hawkins, fell into a dock at Charleston, S. C. on the 10th inst. and was drowned.

Cyrus Robertson, a black man, said to be a native of this city, fell from the side of the schr. Cygnets, into the river, at Fredericksburg, Virginia, on the 18th inst. and was drowned.

A negro boy, who was fishing with others near Charleston on the 11th instant, fell into the water, when a gentleman, a cashier of one of the banks, observing his imminent danger, jumped into the stream, and rescued the little fellow from drowning.

Capt. Gaul arrived at this port on Saturday from Laguyra, brings information that a body of troops have arrived at Maracaybo for its defence, for which the merchants of that place and Caraccas have to pay $1200 per month towards their support.

A new Carrier having been engaged to deliver this paper to the subscribers in the North Western district of the city, our subscribers in that direction will leave notice in case they may not receive it regularly.

Thomas Shipley.

Mr. T. Moore has lately published a new number of the Illustrated, a reprint, it is not necessary to say, in all respects, to either of the two former ones. We subscribe from it the following song adapted to a young man, 25 or 30, that kind in which the poet-composer has been successful.

SONG.

How gently love, my darling,
Thou comest to the side,
Thou art an ear to hear
And heart to be in love.
Thou art the voice to speak,
As every eye to see,
Oh! what a bliss it would be
To have thee near me.
Now that I am here, my darling,
Thou art my life and soul,
Thou art my heart and life,
Thou art my all and goal.
Thou art my life and soul,
Thou art my heart and life,
Thou art my all and goal.
Thou art my life and soul,
Thou art my heart and life,
Thou art my all and goal.

EARLY RISING.

The morning of every day is the beginning of every man's life. One of your greatest assets—for I know you well and do not mean to flatter you—one of your greatest assets is that you do not seize upon the beginning of your life so early as you might do. You lived yesterday, indeed, to a good old age, and died last night after the powers of your mind and body were entirely exhausted. But I must remind you, my friend, that you have spent the greater part of the youth of this day to the end of the day. The great business of your life was up before you; you have been running after it this whole afternoon, and I am afraid you will never overtake it till old age overtakes you.

SETTING THE HEAD.

In a trial which lately took place in the court of common pleas, London, where the plaintiff was a tailor, and the defendant an insolvent man of business, the following disclosure took place:
Q.—Were there two of the coats that did not fit?
A.—They did not fit the head.
Q.—The head! I thought coats were made to fit the body?
A.—Yes, but the head might not be compelled to assume the shape of the coat. The question was decided.
Q.—We often make coats which fit extremely well, but some fault is found, and they are sent back to be altered. In such a case, we say they do not fit the head. We keep them a proper time, and then send them back untouched, when they are found to be just the thing, and to fit perfectly.

A HIGH AUTHORITY.

Mr. Curran was once engaged in a legal argument; behind him stood his colleague, a gentleman whose person was remarkably tall and slender, and who had originally intended to take orders. The Judge observed that the case under discussion involved a question of ecclesiastical law—"Then," said Curran, "I can refer your lordship to a high authority behind me, who was once intended for the church, though, in my opinion, he was fitter for the steeple."

In a certain town, not more than fifty miles from London, as the clergyman was holding forth in his usual drowsy manner, one of the Deacons, probably influenced by the narcotic qualities of the discourse, fell into a doze. The preacher happening to see the words, What is the price of all earthly treasures? The good Deacon, who kept a small store, thinking the enquiry respecting some kind of merchandise, immediately answered, seven and sixpence a dozen.

Besides a large number of $50, $20, &c.

Being a larger number than was sold and paid by any other broker in the same lottery. May he not then, with confidence, claim the attention of the public and his friends, to the following scheme of the Union Canal Lottery, new series, the merits of which will be discovered by a mere perusal? The mode of drawing is already familiar to the public, and therefore needs no explanation.

OLDRIDGE'S

BALM OF COLUMBIA.

OLDRIDGE begs leave to inform the inhabitants of the United States and elsewhere, that he has discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing the hair from falling off, in the short space of FORTY EIGHT HOURS after the first application.

This Balm will also restore hair on bald places, and speedily cure the dandruff. He now considers it altogether useless to continue to give signatures, its utility being universally known in Philadelphia, and hundreds are at this time receiving their hair again. J. O. begs leave to return thanks to the generous Americans, for the liberal encouragement bestowed upon his capillary restorative since its first discovery, and hopes to merit a continuance of their favours. Prepared and sold at one dollar per bottle, and half bottle 50 cents, at No. 554 South Front street, and at No. 11 North Fourth street, Philadelphia, by

JOHN OLDRIDGE.

A. ATKINSON'S

SUPERIOR PATENT SPRING RIDING SADDLES,

AND PATENT LAPORTE BRIDLES, &c.

HAVING purchased of JOHN J. MOORE, of the city of New-York, the sole and entire right making and vending his newly invented SPRING SEAT and SPRING POINTED SADDLES within the city and county of Philadelphia, offers them for sale,

AT HIS SADDLE & HARNESS MANUFACTORY,

No. 5 North Fifth street.

Gentlemen are respectfully invited to call and see the principle on which they are constructed.

Nearly two years' trial of the above Saddles in New-York, has rendered comments unnecessary—sident of their utility he offers them to the public, that they may decide on their superiority.

The Laporte Bridles are constructed in such a manner as to curb the most vicious Horse without injuring him, and with perfect ease and safety to the rider. They are well adapted for Ladies, and persons not in the practice of riding, as it gives them full power over their Horses in cases of flight.

They can also be applied to Harness of every description. Also, for sale, an assortment of Superior

STEEL and PLATED BITS and STIRRUPS.

N. B. Gentlemen can be accommodated with Spring Saddles for trial, if required. June 15-1f
